GREAT SCOTT! HE MAY NOT BE IN DANGER -- BUT THOSE TWO CARS BEHIND ARE! THEY'RE ABOUT TO COLLIDE!

ZOOMING DOWN, THE MAN OF STEEL PROPELS HIMSELF BETWEEN THE TWO CARS--ACTING AS A HUMAN CUSHION!

WHAT TO DO IF POLIO COMES YOUR WAY

Keep children with their own friends. Keep them away from people they have not been with right along, especially in close, daily living. Many people have polio infection without showing signs of sickness. Without knowing it, they can pass the infection on to others.

Try not to get over-tired by work, hard play or travel. If you already have the polio infection in your body, being very tired may bring on serious polio.

Keep from getting chilled. Don't bathe or swim too long in cold water. Take off wet clothes at once. Chilling can lessen your body's protection against polio.

Keep clean. Wash hands carefully before eating and always after using the toilet. Hands may carry polio infection into the body through the mouth. Also keep food clean and covered.

WATCH FOR EARLY SIGNS OF SICKNESS

Polio starts in different ways—with headache, sore throat, upset stomach or fever. Persons coming down with polio may also feel nervous, cross or dizzy. They may have trouble in swallowing or breathing. Often there is a stiff neck and back.

ACT QUICKLY—CALL YOUR DOCTOR AT ONCE

Until he comes, keep the patient quiet and in bed, away from others.

The GOAT GETTER

“WHAT kind of a goat is a scape-goat?” asked Sammy Squirrel.

“There’s no such animal,” said Professor Oscar Owl. “It’s just a saying. Anybody can be a scape-goat.”

“How?” asked Roger Raccoon.

“By taking the blame for something he didn’t do,” said Professor Owl.

“Is there any other kind of a goat that isn’t a goat?” asked Roscoe Rabbit.

“Yes,” said Prof. Owl. “The Rocky Mountain Goat. He’s an Antelope, and belongs to the deer family. He’s not a goat at all.

“He lives high up in the Rockies, wears a thick white woolly coat to keep him warm, has sharp horns, and is an expert climber. So much for the Facts, now for the Fancy Story.

“I knew a Mountain Goat named Gregory who was anything but an expert mountain climber. He was quite a problem to his parents right from the start. For Gregory was the clumsiest mountain goat who ever lived. Every day, as soon as he could walk, his father tried to teach him how to clamber up and down the steep cliffs and rocks. Gregory hated it.

“‘Listen, Pop,’ he’d say. ‘Why do we have to climb mountains all the time?’

“‘You’re a Mountain Goat, that’s why,’ said his father. ‘And I’m going to teach you how to climb mountains, if it’s the last thing I do.’

“Gregory’s father had no idea then how nearly right he was.

“‘All right,’ said Gregory. ‘So we climb mountains. Then what do we do?’

“‘Look at the scenery,’ said his father.

“‘But it’s always the same,’ said Gregory. ‘Nothing but high mountains covered with ice and snow, day in and day out.’

“‘Excuses, excuses,’ said his father, angrily. ‘I’m ashamed of you. Here I am the Chief of all the Mountain Goats, and my own son disgraces me.’

“‘Okay, Pop,’ said Gregory. ‘I’ll do my very best, but I know I won’t like it.’

“And from then on, Gregory really worked hard to make his father proud of him. He followed his instructions very carefully, especially the one big rule of mountain climbing, never to look down.

“One by one, Gregory managed to climb the smaller peaks, with his father shoving pushing, nudging and bracing from below. He seemed to be making such good progress, that his father decided to make him try the highest mountain in the range. That would be the final test.

"Gregory's father had such confidence and pride in Gregory, that he commanded all the Mountain Goats for miles around to come and watch the big event.

"On the morning of the big day, Gregory was awakened by his father.

"Today," said he, "you will climb the highest peak in the Rockies. I know you can do it. Every Mountain Goat in the range will be here to watch and celebrate."

"I won't let you down, Pop," said Gregory.

"They started out at dawn, for the mountain peak they were to climb was miles high, and would take an expert nearly all day.

"As they started, Gregory looked around. Sure enough, from all directions, thousands of mountain goats were streaming up. Some were only tiny specks in the distance. Gregory threw out his chest, filled his lungs with air and said:

"Let's go, Pop!"

"All morning they climbed up and up, and hit the snow line at noon.

"Now comes the really hard part. Have you got it in you?" asked his father.

"I won't let you down, Pop," vowed Gregory.

For many hours after, Gregory toiled and grunted and snorted, made daring leaps from crag to crag, scrambled up the steep slopes, while his father encouraged and praised him all the time.

"Finally, near sundown, he made the top. It was a great achievement.

"All day long the other mountain goats had slowly followed Gregory and his father. When Gregory stood at last on the very top, they were clustered by thousands. They were jammed from a few feet below the summit for a mile down on all sides of the mountain. Gregory's father lifted up a hoof, and pointed proudly at him.

"Look," he shouted. "That's my boy."

"Gregory was still looking up, as usual when he climbed mountains.

"At his father's words, a great cheer broke from the assembled goats.

"Hooray for Gregory," they yelled.

"Gregory lowered his head in surprise. He looked down, saw the crowds and then saw something else. He was looking straight down for four miles into the valley far below. And then he got it, the worst thing that can happen to a mountain climber. Height Fright!

"Gregory's knees caved in, and he slipped. Down he fell, bumping into his father. His father lost his footing, and bumped into a couple more goats. They in turn bumped into others, knocking them down, and the Avalanche began!

"Gregory had started the first avalanche, the first mountain slide of mountain goats, in history! Fifty thousand of them landed down the bottom of the mountain in one big heap.

"Two hours later, Gregory and his father, who were on the bottom, crawled out from under, dazed and bruised.

"Well, son," said his father. "You were right. You didn't let me down, you pushed me."

"Sorry, Pop," said Gregory, "that I had to get your goat."

"Don't be so modest," said his father. "You're a real goat-getter. You got the goats of fifty thousand goats in one minute flat—a world's record."
